Siblo's season started last night. The old injouse was well filled, and there was some-injouse was well filled, and there was some-injouse interest in inglike eagerness and genuine lack of all the gent, there was an ominous lack of all the gent, there was an ominous lack of all the gent, there was an ominous lack of all the gent, there was an ominous lack of all the gent of the gent in the endinger of the gent in the gent of the gent in the while it littler, because it had been very wanty received at its original production in paireity a few months ago. "The Khedive" chiefly lacks originality

Is melodies, which are entirely conventional in ferm, are imitations of Suilivan, Von Suppe, and Strauss, easily recognizable by the averare patron of light opera. There is not in the ntire score a number that will linger in the satire score a nory. The orchestration, more-ser, has been poorly done, and the libretto is pt only reminiscent, but it is puerile, at that, The subject is presumably Egyptian, but

The company did not reveal any conspicuely diever performers, though there is a grounder of one in the chief comedian, Ferris farman, whose methods suggest a close and of the dryness of J. H. kyley and the hilaty of Francis Wilson. Mr. Hartman caused the only unforced laughter of the night, and perhaps this public will learn to like him better when he shall appear under more auspleious circumstances. Bettina Girard, who has aswagger manner that is altogether disproportionate to her small volce, was listened to with some curiosity. She is the fire Padelori of other days in Washington society, Much had been promised in her behall, but she fulfilled very little of her advance praise. The heroic tenor role was unevenly sing by Wallace McCreery, who is an old hand at the trying work; and the other important sharacters were impersonated by W. F. Rochester, an uninteresting but hard-working low comedian; Lotta Gilman. a fairly good soprano: Augusta Roche, an always serviceable towns, and J. J. Haffael, a good baritone, as well as the husband of Bettins Girard.

deenna and J. J. Raffael, a good baritone, as well as the husband of liettina Girard.

The revital of "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows" at Proctor's Theatre last evening demands attention because it was the commencement for the sason at this house. The audience was large and fine, and the auditorium as well as its stage hore an aspect of renewed prosperity. As before, the play's broad yet clever and artistic farciality was given with high comedy polish and nicety by a cast from Charles Frohmans small army of tlayers. The important peculi in the company was Georgie Drew Barrymors, who enacted the livelier of the widows with all the charm and dash that had been expected of so glitted and accomplished a comedisane. In his part she will not only sustain, but increase berreputation as one of the very few comic attesses above the southerstellevel. Two chests with thosina Vokes last season, and Mattle Ferguson, who has for sevaral years played the heroines in W. I. Scanlan's Irish pleces. Miss Banker was grated and demure as the second widow, whis Miss Ferguson was amusingly quaint adpert as the indulged servant. The previcusty admired impersonations by Joseph Heliad, Thomas H. Burns, and Frederic Bond was resumed apprintedly, and the fresh start of "R. Wilkinson's Widows" was altogether triamphant.

This has been a trying week for the theatres which have had the element of novelty in their reogrammes. The sultry nights have had somewhat damasing elect, and the sharp competition of the houses where new bills have been put on heat ledged to further decrease the alternative charged to long the production dates the leest to do new wrinkle yesterday begins an afternoon performance of 'Prince hard'. This plan was tested by him, it is vivilly teemie, at a Boston theatre some time are, but with melancholy results. The autience at the Garden yesterday afternoon had thenty of room to move about. Frince hard, however, is an admirable main to hall not preezy and frivolous snoon. Horself hard, however, is an admirable main to hall not breezy and frivolous snoon. Horself hard has being considerably mark yet. The plany has much in it that I go and the changes will add greatly the production of the plany has much in it had been accompanied to be the major that has altogether attractive. I is now announced that this will be the may play that Miss Coghlan in five the production of the plany has much in the stand of the plany has been alternative that this will be the may play that Miss Coghlan in his account of the plany has a stand of the plany has a stand of the plany has an anounced that this will be the may play that Miss Coghlan in his account of the plany has a stand of the plany has a form of the plany has a stand o eems to be firm. Perhaps it is rarily because the division horse now does something like a sprint when he has to carry his fair burden of. The horse is a famously uncertain inctoo in stage presentations anywar, now otheless, he is growing in popularly. There will be horse in Mar's Wainwright & Amy holsen't all Paimer's. Blanche Walsh, who pays these Proportion will make her entry in the health of the sense on horseboack. She will not rule instride us the Virgin Queen is said to have sometimes done but will be on a saidles mething resembling a small howdah.

It may come about after all that Edward J. Healey, who refused some time ago to play Bules force in the forth oming new drama. Lincoln, at accept the rile. Honley had coursed thom a trilliant same ass in "The Black Sassue" at the 1 ni n Square, but the redict is also getter against that venture, and it is now said that very recently he has incleated his williarness to play Houth. This would indend that The Black Masque" will loss the services of its best actor.

Worse than the piracy of plays is the practice of "doctoring" press opinions. This has for years been a common nutrace, but reputable managers are seldom if ever guilty of it. Repeated exposure of the trick has not been of lasting avail, and so it seems almost useless to make a protest; but the case of Lillian Kennedy, who played in a Bowery theatre last week, is so rank in its dishonesty that it calls for notice. Miss Kennedy was very reservedly praised by THE Sun for her work in the play called "She Could" Marry Three." It was said of her merely that she could sing, dance, and act—a little. Out of this her managers have evolved, in an advertisement, the startling declaration that she combines the various excellencies of Lotta Annie Pixley, and Maggie Mitcheil, and for this attrement they make THE Sun responsible. What THE Sun actually said—and there was no mincing of words—was that she entirely lacked these artistic merits. This cool misrepresentation is entirely in keeping with the plagjarism committed by John J. Kennedy, who had the effontery to bill "She Couldn't Marry Three" as his own work. He stole the first two acts.—"business," dialogue, situations, and climaxes—from that mouldy Buckstone play. "The Rough Diamond." Theatregoers everywhere who are old enough to vote will easily recognize the theft.

dislogue, situations, and elimaxes—from that mouldy Buckstone play. The Rough Diamond. Theatregoers everywhere who are old enough to vote will easily recognize the theft.

There is ne lack of new matter in the bills recently put before out-of-town theatregoers. Fifteen or twenty dramas, farces, and oueras has been tested for the first time within the corree F. Marion the usual various results into farce comedy by playing domed. In "A Brass Monkey," has started out as a star, and has just made his debut in a New England city, His pleve, which is called "Mr. Macaroni" was obviously constructed so as to permit the introduction of Marion's cleverest work, the impersonation of Italian characters. In "Mr. Macaroni" he is the hero, a young American in love with a notional girl who has a fondness for foreign titles. To our her of her vanity and strengthen himself as an Italian, and so carries out a well-worn plot to a blissful conclusion. Marion's debut is said by his friends to give promise of his success. "Leuceiu Valley," in Minnesots, has found in it a very velocity in the control of the recent in the White Mountains, who waits on the hotel tables to obtain the money for his college course. Aleve story is developed in the play, of course. Herbert Hall Winslow, who is among the youngest, most industrious, and least self-assertive of native blaywrights, has recently witnessed the first performance of his farcical comedy. Birds of a Feather, which he wrote at the instigation of Marie Saller, a promising young acress, believed by her friend-toponsees that delusive theatrical commodity known as "a future," Miss Saller is a Flaidalphina and a pupil of J. Hoberts, a tragedian of the palmy days. Last year she and Roberts starred in a version of "Faust." Her change from melodrama to harden as in the shape of a piece called "Down on the Farm." by C. F. Hanceck, whose name is not familiar among those of American dramatics. This play seems to differ from its prede aspect to the entire building. Prof. Worth will make his re-intrance as locturer, and will again give his interesting chats upon his remarkable collection of curiosities. The performers in the large theather a very pretty one - will be of the best in their lines. A number of new curios have been added during the summer, and several scientific illusions will astonish, please, and purzle the public. Prof. Hicker's orchestra will be a permanent feature. The usual concerts will be given on Sundays.
